

Approved Minors for a
School of Communication Major College of Arts and Sciences

*Prepared by Marilyn S. Kritzman
Faculty Specialist
School of Communication
Western Michigan University*

Communication students must have a least one major and one minor (or two majors) to graduate from Western. Since the study of Communication is related to almost every field of endeavor, all disciplines should be examined when selecting a particular major or minor. We encourage you to select a minor that compliments your major, enhances your skill sets, and above all is a subject you enjoy.

The School of Communication endorses a policy of self-determination in the selection of a minor. Therefore, you may select a minor from any other program at Western. You are unable to select both a communication major and minor when planning your academic program.

This is the most current list of non-teaching minors at Western Michigan University that are available to Communication students. The minors have been approved by the Committee to Oversee General Education. Please contact the department's advising office directly for more information and/or to declare a minor with their program.
