

Possible Careers for a Film, Video and Media Studies major

Film, Video and Media Studies (FVM) major lays emphasis on the process of making radio and television production. Careers in the field vary from news anchor to videographer. There are many aspects of production which must come together in order for a program to be created, such as videotaping and editing, as well as the management, directing and acting. Students seeking a career in Broadcasting must be versatile and flexible because of the odd hours and pressure that can come with careers in this field.

Station Manager
Director of Broadcasting
Film/Tape Librarian
Community Relations Director
TV News Anchor
TV Script Writer
News Director
News Writer
Transmitter Engineer
Technical Director
Media Buyer
Market Researcher
Actor
Announcer
Disc Jockey
News Anchor
Public Relations Manager
Comedy Writer
Casting Director
Producer
Researcher
Traffic Manager
Talk Show Host
Photographer
Videographer
Film Director
Advertising Agent
Audio Controller
Copywriter
Corporate Video Producer
Editorial Assistant
Independent Video Producer

Media Critic
Non-linear Video Editor
Photojournalist
Production Assistant
Radio Production
Floor Manager
Special Events Planner
Tape Logger
Unit Manager
Film Editor
Set Manager/Designer
Tape Operator
Lighting Director
Grip