Medical school granted full accreditation

In the final step of a journey that began some seven years ago, the Liaison Committee on Medical Education Feb. 13 granted full accreditation to the WMU Homer Stryker M.D. School of Medicine for five years.

Five is the maximum number of years for which a new school receiving its initial full accreditation can be accredited by LCME, the national accrediting body for educational programs leading to the medical doctor degree.

WMU's medical school, or WMed as it is commonly known, is set to graduate its first class Sunday, May 13, during a ceremony in Miller Auditorium.

Most state licensing boards require that U.S. medical schools granting the M.D. degree be accredited by the LCME as a condition of licensure of the school's graduates. U.S. medical schools also must have LCME accreditation to ensure that their students can take the U.S. Medical Licensing Examination. In addition, graduates of LCME-accredited schools are eligible for residency programs accredited by the Accreditation Council For Graduate Medical Education.

Hal B. Jenson, WMed's founding dean, shared the school's latest accreditation news recently with its Board of Directors, faculty, residents, staff and students, and expressed his appreciation for the work of numerous stakeholders that made the important milestone possible.

Volunteer by Feb. 23 for Success@WMU task force

Project directors, an advisory committee, a series of task forces and a firm timetable are all now in place to begin implementation of Success@WMU, one of two campuswide transformational initiatives announced by WMU President Edward Montgomery in January (see Page 3 for related stories).

Success@WMU is a large-scale campus commitment to building past WMU success with learning communities. The initiative ensures that all new undergraduate students have access to a learning community led by a peer leader assisted by faculty and staff. The learning communities are intended to not only help welcome and orient new students, but also aid them in building skills and making the connections essential for success in college.

With a firm goal of having the initiative ready to offer to some 5,500 new students for fall 2018, Administrative Lead Keith Hearit and Project Co-director Monica Liggins-Abrams are coordinating the work of a 13-member advisory group and 10 different task forces charged with quickly developing elements of the overall initiative.

More complete information and a link to the task force nomination form are available at wmich.edu/president by clicking Transformational Initiative Fund, then Success@WMU. Nominations must be made no later than Friday, Feb. 23.

“We're using a flat organization structure,” Hearit says. “The work will be done at the task-force level, with each group charged with a discrete purpose, utilizing existingContinued on Page 4

Project makes researching archived WMU news nearly painless

University Libraries has been madly digitizing a wealth of WMU's historical publications through ScholarWorks at WMU, a cloud-based institutional repository offered on the Digital Commons platform by Berkeley Electronic Press.

ScholarWorks at WMU serves as a digital showcase of the research, scholarly and creative output of members of the campus community. The archiving project consists of ScholarWorks and a SelectedWorks Author Gallery and is administered by University Libraries. The repository became fully operational in 2012 at scholarworks.wmich.edu. Since then, libraries staff have archived digital copies of most of WMU's major news-related periodicals. Users now have access to searchable PDFs of these materials and can browse by collection, discipline and author. The Western Michigan University collection is particularly helpful for history buffs, as it contains a wealth of items, some of which date back to just after the institution's founding.

In addition to copies of the Western News from 1972 to today, the collection includes the Emeritus News, Kalamazoo Normal Record, The Westerner, University yearbooks, and variousContinued on Page 4
Food Marketing Conference to focus on the customer

The University’s acclaimed Food Marketing Conference is set for Monday and Tuesday, March 19-20, and is expected to draw up to 800 industry executives to DeVos Place in Grand Rapids, Michigan. The event features collegiate ensembles from across the northern United States performing daily through Saturday, Feb. 24.

Friday, the WMU Concert Band will perform at 7:15 p.m. and the University Symphonic Band at 8:30 p.m. All concerts are taking place in Miller Auditorium and are free and open to the public. For more information, visit wmich.edu/music/events.

Workshop slated for researchers

WMU researchers can learn more about what federal agencies value most in evaluating proposals during a free Bigger Impacts 101 workshop, Laurie Van Egern, a member of the National Alliance for Bigger Impacts steering committee, will present from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Thursday, March 1, in the President’s Dining Room at the Bernhard Center. Registration is required. For details or to register, visit wmich.edu/research/bigger-impacts.

Festival brings singers to WMU

One of the largest, oldest and most successful high school choral festivals in the United States will be held on campus Thursday, March 15. The 80th annual Southwestern Michigan Vocal Festival will draw participants from 19 southwest Michigan high schools and culminate in a 7 p.m. performance in Miller Auditorium. The concert is free and open to the public, and will feature the 90-voice Festival Chorus nearly filling the first level of the auditorium. For additional upcoming music concerts and festivals, visit wmich.edu/music/events.

Films examine inequality, solutions

Stories of inequality in people’s everyday lives and solutions that can help unite the country are themes of a free film festival underway on campus. Featured are three films from the “America Divided Series,” produced by Norman Lear, Common and Shonda Rhimes.

Two films have yet to be shown: “Something in the Water,” Monday, March 19, and “A House Divided,” Wednesday, April 11. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. in the Bernhard Center’s North Ballroom, with films and post-engagement activities running from 7 to 9 p.m.

Sustainable business expert to talk

Developing methods to account for the positive effects of individual and corporate sustainability efforts—and not just the harms being caused—is the topic of a free lecture Thursday, March 15. Gregory Norris from Harvard University will present the talk from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in 1910 Sangren Hall.

Free concerts part of conference

The WMU Concert Band and University Symphonic Band will both perform Friday, Feb. 23, in Miller Auditorium as part of the College Band Directors National Association North Central Division Conference. The event features collegiate ensembles from across the northern United States performing daily through Saturday, Feb. 24.

Friday, the WMU Concert Band will perform at 10:15 a.m. and the University Symphonic Band at 8:30 p.m. All concerts are taking place in Miller Auditorium and are free and open to the public. For more information, visit wmuchdna.com or call (269) 387-4667.

Dance emerita honored for advocacy

Wendy Cornish, emeritus in dance, is the recipient of this year’s Partners in Dance Community Dance Advocacy Award.

The award, presented at a reception Feb. 2, celebrates an individual who has demonstrated significant accomplishment in advancing and supporting dance in the greater Kalamazoo area through volunteerism, philanthropy, artistic achievement, teaching and administrative leadership.

Cornish, who retired from WMU in 2003, has been an advocate and champion of dance for more than 50 years, including 37 years as professor and chair of dance at WMU.

She was instrumental in shaping the department’s vision and curricular approach, evolving classes originally housed in the department of physical education to an independent program within the College of Fine Arts. She also was instrumental in the development of several regional and national organizations, in many cases, serving them for decades.

Faculty member’s gift funds internships

David Houghton, political science, is one of many faculty members who have started a fund to benefit students. The David G. Houghton Internship Endowment was established to support the Capital and Local Internship Program and expand its scope by placing students in internships throughout Washington, D.C.

The former department chair was instrumental in starting the program with the help of the Lee Honors College. Between 1990 and 2012, the program gave more than 880 interns practical work experience in state and local government.

His dream of expanding the program to include Washington has been made possible through the endowment. To add to the fund, make a donation at bit.ly/2CAnw8.

Grad assistant earns two awards

Justine Morneau, facilities graduate assistant for University Recreation, earned the Robert “Bob” English Outstanding Student Award from the Michigan Intramural Sports Association late last year. In addition, Morneau will be one of only 12 graduate students across the country to receive the National William W. Nason Student Leadership & Academic Award in March from the National School for Recreational Sports Management.

The Bad Axe, Michigan, student is enrolled in the Master of Arts in Recreational Leadership program with a concentration in higher education and student affairs leadership. She earned that concentration’s 2017 Outstanding 1st-Year Student Award in the area of diversity and inclusion and expects to graduate this April.

In her graduate assistant role at WMU, she assists in overseeing the Student Recreation Center and its student staff.
Several faculty, staff members receive Spring Convocation awards

Faculty and staff members across campus will be recognized for their teaching, research, diversity and engagement efforts Friday, Feb. 23, during the "Spring Convocation: Recognition of Discovery, Diversity and Global Engagement" event.

The annual spring gathering will feature symposia, scholarly presentations and award presentations by four units. This year's awards will go to 15 employees.

Extended University Programs

Nominate colleagues for semianual staff award

Nominations for the spring 2018 round of WMU's semianual Make a Difference awards are due Wednesday, Feb. 28. Make a Difference is a campuswide peer-to-peer program that recognizes staff members for their accomplishments and daily investment of energy and creativity. Every fall and spring, semianual awards are presented to a maximum of 15 people. Those selected for the accolade receive a monetary prize and are eligible to receive the annual Make a Difference Award. For more information, visit wmich.edu/makeadifference.

Nomination instructions and forms as well as lists of previous winners are available year-round on this webpage.

University summit to focus on student success issues

Editor's note Also see the related transformational initiative story on Page 1 of this issue.

An afternoon of innovation, collaboration and inspiration has been planned for the spring 2018 Student Success Summit, set for noon to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 7, in the Bernhard Center's South Ballroom.

Those planning to attend are required to register by Monday, March 5, at wmich.edu/changerear/search/frcostest by clicking Student Success Summit.

Faculty and staff members are invited to attend the semianual summit, which this semester will mark the campus launch of the Success@WMU Transformational Initiative. Attendees will be able to network and participate in facilitated discussions with the goal of moving toward increasing student success and retention in a collaborative way.

The event is being hosted by Broncos FIRST and Success@WMU. It will feature opening remarks by Interim Provost Sue Stapleton and closing remarks by President Edward Montgomery. In addition, a panel of national experts will discuss topics including academic engagement, peer mentoring, dietetic student retention and mental health as well as facilitate interest-based discussion groups. Lunch will be provided.

The scheduled panel members are Betty Barefoot, a senior fellow at the John Gardner Institute; Phaedra White Abbot, director of the Discovery Scholars Program at the University of Texas at Austin; Robert Simmons III, president of the Student Year Alliance; and Margaret Price, program director and associate professor of disability studies and English at Ohio State University.

Obituaries

Shirley Bach, emerita in philosophy and internationally recognized authority on biomedical ethics, died Feb. 13. She was 86. Bach joined the faculty in 1961 and retired in 1997 after 37 years of service.

Doris A. Ray, formerly an office associate in health, physical education and recreation and administrative secretary for the McGinnis Reading Center and Clinic, died Feb. 11. She was 79. Ray came to WMU in 1965 and retired in 2006 after 41 years of service.

Clara Van Eck, formerly an accounting clerk for what is now Extended University Programs, died Jan. 29. She was 96. Van Eck joined the staff in 1971 and retired in 1984 after 13 years of service. A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, May 12, in the Langeland Family Funeral Homes Westside Chapel, 1926 S. 9th St., in Kalamazoo.

Little Theatre selected to be site for esports arena

Editor's note Also see the related transformational initiative story on Page 1 of this issue.

After weeks of reviewing possible campus locations for the new esports@WMU arena, the Little Theatre in the Exact Campus has been selected as site that will be home to the effort that is one of two Transformational Initiatives set to launch in fall 2018.

An eight-member project team has spent recent weeks visiting and reviewing campus locations with the goal of finding a location that can be readily renovated into an arena in which students can compete and spectators have a comfortable place to watch competitions, says Scott Puckett, project manager.

Built in 1942 and renovated in 1997, the Little Theatre seats 192 and has a traditional stage and auditorium-style seating. While most colleges and universities have competitive facilities used for competitions and skill development with a minimum of 22 stations that can be programmed designed to meet the development of academic programming designed to meet the career demands of what is expected to be a $1.5 billion U.S. industry by 2020.

Project team members have already begun reaching out to groups on campus to promote the new facility. They visited the Feb. 10 meeting of the League of Legends Registered Student Association and had a booth at the Feb. 19 admitted student gathering on campus.

The intent is for the University to open its gaming facility at the start of the fall 2018 semester and make it available for a variety of competitive events, including to community groups organizing video gaming events. The facility is also expected to allow for the development of academic programming designed to meet the career demands of what is expected to be a $1.5 billion U.S. industry by 2020.

Many Bronco couples are blood relatives rather than spouses. That’s true of Cindy and Jessica Beebe and Darlene and Shayla Zackery, two mother-daughter pairs of custodians. Although no one in the quartet works together in the same buildings, they share the same bubbly personalities as well as a uniform sense of unit camaraderie and pride in the work they do for the University.

Darlene has been at WMU the longest—31 years this month. She’s stationed in Floyd Hall while her daughter, Shayla, prefers to float, working wherever needs arise. “I like the people in building custodial and support services,” says Darlene, who’s been at the hall since it opened. “I really enjoy my job. If I didn’t, I wouldn’t have been here 31 years!”

Shayla came to WMU after budget cuts eliminated her job at Michigan Works. “I wanted to know what my mom had been doing for so much of her life and what all the Bronco positivity and hoopla was about,” she says, as her fellow custodians flash knowing smiles.

New, Shayla is on track to celebrate her fourth year on the staff. That will happen this summer at about the same time she’ll earn a bachelor’s degree from WMU in university studies with a minor in business.
