Scenario

As the newly hired Rehabilitation Services Director of a small healthcare provider (skilled nursing facility, hospital, outpatient clinic, home care services, behavioral healthcare) it is ultimately your responsibility to ensure compliance with Federal, State, and local regulations; practice guidelines; and, applicable accreditation standards. Your company leases an Electronic Health Record system from E-Med Records which is customizable based on customer needs. Within the first week of hire, you receive two separate Additional Documentation Requests (ADR) from the Medicare Fee-for-Service Audit Recovery Program which request copies of occupational therapy documentation for a specific period of time. The documentation requested for review involved two separate therapists, one of which is no longer with the company as a result of her employment termination. You consult with the manager of the Billing Department and compile the requested documentation and send this to Medicare prior to the ADR deadline.

As a result, you determine the need to quickly identify a process that will provide you guidance and serve as a preventative cycle for quality improvement. The two prominent methods of healthcare quality improvement are the Total Quality Improvement (TQI)/Continuous Quality Improvement (CQI) and Six Sigma models. You have resources provided for both methods and begin the search in order to define the process, analyze each approach, and justify the choice of approach to other managers and your CEO/Administrator and apply the process to propose a solution.

| Manager, Billing Department According to the manager of the billing department, this request is in addition to the standard requests that occur every 45 days as part of the usual review. The manager concedes she believes the additional requests “are the result of careless therapy documentation which is costing the company lost revenue.” She continues to say, “we need a better system to review the documentation before it is sent to the intermediary for billing to Medicare.” Quality Improvement Officer After submission of the requested documentation you begin a discussion with the nurse who is also the Quality Improvement Officer to determine the preferred quality improvement method and learn there is no preferred method being utilized. The Quality Improvement Officer stated, “this is a small company and we all work together to resolve problems when they arise.” She tells you in confidence, “the documentation in the therapy department is sloppy and the last person did nothing to fix the problem and that’s why she is no longer here.” |
